

Works Cited

- Armor, John, and Peter Wright. Manzanar. New York: Random House, 1988. This offering is related to the specific experiences concerning the Manzanar Relocation Center in California. The book centers on the collective experience of all Japanese Americans imprisoned at this camp, but creates the "personal" by exploring the dehumanizing process of the experience which can be related to by any compassionate reader. Photographs by Ansel Adams bring life at Manzanar closer to the reader by reinforcing the text with concrete images.
- Harrison, Don. CNN news report of 10/23/1992. During the period from the Japanese invasion of China in 1931 to the end of World War II Japanese troops killed 10,000,000 Chinese people. During the "Rape of Nanking" 300,000 Chinese people were killed. This report was in reference to difficulties faced in the ongoing attempt to re-establish normalized diplomatic relations between the two countries.
- Herman, Masako. The Japanese in America, 1843-1973. Dobbs Ferry, NY: Oceana, 1974. This book provides important chronological, historical, and statistical information for a more complete understanding of the events that prefaced the relocation of Japanese Americans in the United States during World War II.
- Houston, Jeanne Wakatsuki, and James D. Houston. Farewell to Manzanar. Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 1973. Although this book is a novel, it still serves as a valuable witness to the Japanese American relocation experience. Jeanne Houston's family spent three and a half years at Manzanar, and in her novel presents an honest view of the face of personal daily life in the camps. The book is prefaced with a short chronology that educates the reader to events as far back as 1869 that help to set the stage for the eventual tragedy of concentration camps in the U.S.
- Inouye, Frank T. "Immediate Origins of the Heart Mountain Draft Resistance Movement." Peace & Change 23.2 (1998): 148-167. EBSCOhost: Academic Search Elite. Lincoln Land Comm. College Lib., Springfield, IL. 4 October 2005. <http://search.epnet.com/>. Inouye presents the story of draft resisters at the Heart Mountain Internment Camp. After being uprooted from homes and lives, draft-age Japanese American men were expected to accept the draft call or even enlist in the armed forces during WWII. Even threatened with imprisonment, some men refused to serve.
- Kikuchi, Charles. The Kikuchi Diary. Urbana: U of Illinois P, 1973. This diary of a Nisei interned at the Tanforan Assembly Center prior to removal to the Gila Relocation Center in Arizona is a day by day account of the author's experience during the early years of World War II. The book contains photographs of the attack on Pearl Harbor, Tanforan Assembly Center, the Gila River camp, and the author after the war. The forty page introduction to the book offers a short